SWEATER COAT IS STILL GOOD STYLE

BY ELOISE.

Vacation time is upon us and almost every girl is planning her vacation wardrobe. Of course those girls who are going "back to the farm" this summer, having acquired the habit from their one war summer spent in the fields, will have little trouble deciding what to take on their trip this year. They found out last year that bloomers and middy blouses were the only garments needed and, of course, a large sun hat and heavy shoes.

Those girls, however, who try the sea shore and the mountains and the summer hotels will plan a very different wardrobe. She will want suits and frocks for every occasion from the early morning cross country hike to the formal hotel ball. Her main energy will be given over to the choosing of her sport clothes, for they still occupy a large part of the fashion stage.

VETS SAY THEY HAD PLENTY OF PARADE DUTIES

Most of "Tom, Tom, Tom" and "The Long, Long Trail Into the Land of Our Dreams" to Southern Pines.

"This march? (Says) buddy, there wasn't a hot day or doing of any kind whatever—we were that we didn't have to put on the best of our uniforms and step in the hot sun to the tune of some dolly-up band," a veteran of more than one big overseas battle said to an Argus representative this morning as he stood in a cool place along the course of the parade.

And that's why only after "vets" made their appearance today as paraders.

Today was the first fourth of July that a good many of them could get an "extra hour in the hay" and, not into the hot "parade" but into the command of some non-com.

You'll have to excuse them, please.

"I'm hanging on to the uniform for some future time—maybe a good many years from now. Probably it will look kind of good to me then, but right at present it's too close to the time I took it off to be piling back into it again. When you have drilled for hours at a time in the hot sun and then paraded for some more hours under the same Old Sol, believe me it seems mighty good to be able to stand on the sidelines and watch somebody else's 'parade' returned said.

Guess everyone will agree, too.
